The Session Law Firm Attorneys to Speak at National Forum

KANSAS CITY, MO. (February 23, 2010) – Two associates from The Session Law Firm, an environmental law firm based in Kansas City, Mo., will present at the upcoming Association of Defense Communities \(ADC\) 2010 Winter Forum.

Chris Wendelbo and Shawna Bligh will present in a session titled Hot Environmental Issues for Defense Communities. They will be joined by Steve Rinne, Business Development Officer for the Port Authority of Kansas City, Mo., and Jeffrey A. Bolin, Vice President of Technical Operations for The Dragun Corporation. The Dragun Corporation is an environmental consulting and engineering firm that works with senior management and legal counsel who may be concerned with the direction, cost, and/or liability associated with environmental investigation or remediation efforts. The group will update attendees on the latest legal and technical environmental issues, and multi-agency/department coordination as they relate to defense communities.

“The receipt and redevelopment of former federal facilities can be a catalyst for economic development to a community,” said Wendelbo. “To realize the full economic potential at these sites, communities must often navigate a myriad of complex federal and state environmental laws. This program will focus on existing and emerging environmental issues at these unique sites.”

The ADC 2010 Winter Forum takes place in Albuquerque, N.M. on February 23-24. The theme of the conference is Military Communities: Responding to Change, and is targeted for communities with active, closing or closed military installations; interested private sector companies and organizations; and representatives of the Department of Defense and other federal and state agencies, including Kansas City 6th district councilman, John A. Sharp.
